Why I Will Make a Good Wife

SEND TO FRIEND

Sick of disappointing your family at seder? Bring me home, they'll love me! And with a ring on my finger, a feature in the Sunday Styles section, and a "challah" in the oven, maybe my own family and community will give me a break too.

Lifestyle

- It's time I settled down for: Marriage & Children
- Relationship Status: Single
- Estimated time between marriage and impregnation: I'd like to get a chance to get settled into married life first, so 24-36 hours
- Desired number of Children: My rabbi tells me four: two to replace my parents, one for growth, one for the Holocaust
- Strong Opinions: I'm working on keeping them to myself
- If Married, I Will Strive to be: Docile/Undemanding, Sexually Pliable, Inoffensive/Politically Indifferent, Unambitious/Unintimidating, Less Interesting or Intelligent than You

The Jewish community's priorities of marriage and parenthood aren't a match for everyone.

This Shavuot, as we celebrate the deliverance of Jewish law, deliver a message that isn't about delivering Jewish babies.

Broaden the standards that are used to evaluate a Jewish life. Recognize Jewish women as powerful beyond their reproductive abilities. Celebrate the many types of families in the Jewish community...

...These are the keys to Jewish continuity.
